They have to fix men responsible for the global crisis. Question whether the macho-politicians allow them to be longer. Women win in times of crisis. After the appointment as Prime Minister of Iceland Jóhanna Sigurdardóttir, instruct the portfolio Minister Christine Lagarde French finance, selecting Grybauskaitė president of Lithuania, re-elected German Chancellor Angela Merkel heard the voices, that is the beginning of breaking the monopoly of power of men.

That the image of a confident macho, who drove the world financial crisis, resulting in unemployment of millions of people, fades to give way to a woman. But if a woman at the head of state and government in times of recession, it swallows gender, or just a cleaning, which makes us a moment to leave? Now it is time to wise women and men partner or waiting for us back an aggressive man? 53-year-old Grybauskaitė smiles from blond fringe. A black belt in karate and beats straight from the bridge. Lithuanian presidential election, won in the first round. On the news that the EU Commissioner for the budget will stand, some of its opponents at once withdrew. Unconnected with any party Grybauskaitė supported three quarters of voters. When Lithuania, one of the Baltic countries, which have recently been called the "tiger of Europe", has experienced the effects of economic crisis, went into the streets of Vilnius demonstrators. Grybauskaitė, but could be in Brussels, decided to run for the office of President of Lithuania. Criticized the actions of the government, while promising to modifications of tax policy and liberal laws offering stimulating the economy. For Lithuanians, it was important that there is a political cheat. Was a man from the outside, but from nowhere, since it treats seriously the whole of Europe. He says that he always felt different. A graduate of political economy in the former Leningrad, also worked as an ordinary factory worker. The government of Algirdas Brazauskas, was finance minister and in 2004 established her in the composition of the European Commission. Lithuania's President from June 2009. Once called it "the hope of Lithuania" and compared to Barack Obama. Lithuanians do not promise miracles, on the contrary - during the election campaign made no secret that the difficult times come. After a hundred days of her government supported 90 percent of respondents. It was also positively evaluated the politicians and political scientists. Although Lithuanians are not deluded that it alone will break the monopoly and power of the oligarchs and to fight corruption, is counting on that with the support of parliament and will be assisted by advisers a real impact on the policy of Lithuania. Grybauskaitė image as a political tough guy, which corresponds to the questions briefly, sometimes wiping for verbal aggression, and it fascinates people. It is concrete, cuts off the conversation with journalists who are trying to ask about her private life. Reacted sharply to media reports that he is gay. Childless, has a reputation of working married. He likes to drive a car and hates buying clothes - a nice costume, takes the same fashion in different colors - just to avoid further visits to the shops. Jóhanna Sigurdardóttir was 52 years, lost the battle for leadership of the Party of Social Democrats. At the news of the defeat, raised up a fist. "My time had come to pass," she cried. Nearly fifteen years later was Prime Minister of Iceland. Is the second female prime minister of this country and the world's first person in the highest state position, which admits to a homosexual orientation. Her predecessor, Prime Minister Geir Haarde, the news of financial collapse, reacted to the dramatic words: "Go home to their loved ones and pocieszcie. God help and comfort Iceland ". The presentation came to roll up their sleeves "holy Johann. 67-year-old Sigurdardóttir owes its nickname to the fact that for years has issues physically and mentally handicapped and the elderly. When at the beginning of the crisis include the governments of Iceland, the situation in the country was dismal. Icelandic landscape is dominated by unfinished construction, and the mood of citizens - a growing frustration. For the first time since the Icelandic took to the streets of Reykjavik - walili spoons in pots, they beat the window in the offices of the Government ... The former stewardess, a clerk, then the most experienced, the most popular minister in the government of Prime Minister government created, where the number of women and men is equal. This lady Prime Minister and the powers and the fact that a hand by Iceland crisis nailed to the European Union, gaining her recognition in the eyes of his countrymen. But her sexual orientation does not raise almost no emotion. Fellow citizens say about it: "It is very nice, fair and hard working. It's one of us. " Not only his work but also the attitude of life Sigurdardóttir sends a new message to the world. Before becoming Prime Minister of Iceland, has undergone an internal revolution. The mother of two adult sons today, was the wife of a banker, when you decided to divorce, to enter into a relationship with a woman. Involved with well-known Icelandic playwright, became the mother of another son dressed. That speaks openly about it, highlights the gulf which separates western Europe and especially Scandinavia, in Central Europe. Christine Lagarde, finance minister in the government of Nicolas Sarkozy, the beautiful English delights. About Finance says simply, well, adds to the economic debates and raisins: a philosophical note, a joke or a pinch of linguistic distance. When in 2007, 53-year-old Christine Lagarde was French finance minister, recalled that she was in the national synchronized swimming team. The question whether the synchronization of movements is useful in managing an economic crisis, threw lightly: "There must also be able to hold his breath." The impressive English accent as a student has developed an exclusive school for girls near Washington. After graduating from law in France for over 20 years working in a global law firm Baker & McKenzie, based in Chicago, until he stood on its summit. 3.5 thousand managed a team of lawyers. She returned to France to take the post of Minister of Foreign Trade. When became Prime Minister, François Fillon, took the Ministry of Agriculture, to finally become Minister of Finance with the difficult task of reducing public expenditure and swollen reduce bureaucracy in the government, which employs more than 175 thousand civil servants. It has been said about it, that with his experience working in the United States, few people in France understand the issue of labor productivity. Perhaps for this reason the French political elite refers to it with caution this patch, "which it says what he thinks." Lagarde, who is not a politician, but enjoys respect among ordinary people because of their skills and hard work. Recently Forbes magazine put her on the list of 15 most influential women in the world. Adult children of this yoga, opponents of violence, continuer ideals in the modern edition, saying that too little thought about myself. She regrets that there was no time to meet with friends. A fortiori, to cultivate roses at his home in Normandy. All have developed an unusual feature: When you speak, people are starting to listen to them. Their strength is knowledge and experience. Revert to a life lost myth wise woman. Do not stand in the ideological confrontation with a man. Must not - win, because professionals are better. In looking for life balance - in oneself and the world around them. Do you allow politicians to follow their example was followed by other competent, intelligent women? Do you permit them to power? Or maybe they will do everything to left whenever they are hearing from the crisis? There is a chance that science will come to succor equality. Even if women are now cleaning specialists, it is important that voters do not put on.
